EXTRAORDINARY MEETINGS.

By 10 o'clock yesterday morning a good congregation had assembled, and Revs. T. A. Reid and Thurman led in

How to Promote Revivals in the

Mr. Moody, in opening the topic, said that we needed not spasmodic revivals (though periodic awakenings are taught in God's Word), but to be in a constant state of revival. He insisted that every denotion had originated in revivals-those claiming to be "apostolic" having come from Pentecost if their claim is just. He met the objection to revivals that there is "too much excitement," by saying that men get excited about other things—e. g., a horse-race; a change in stocks, &c.; and he did not see why men should not be interested or (if you please) excited about religion. But he denied that he had ever gotten up any excitement" in his meetings which would prevent men from intelligently necepting Christ.

He then met the objection that con verts in these meetings will not hold out well as those who profess at other times and make among the most useful of our

MR. GEORGE C. NEEDHAM was the next speaker, and proposed to

2. The Human Instrumentality. He showed from both the Old and New Testament Scriptures how the Lord sent revivals in answer to the prayers and in blessing upon the efforts of his people.

He insisted that there must be personal effort; that, as in the days of Nehemiah, the people must "have a mind to work"; and as John the Baptist had pointed out Jesus and encouraged the disciples to follow him, as Andrew brought Peter to Jesus, and as the woman at the well went to the city as a personal evangelist, so we must imitate their example, and put forth individual effort for the salvation of men and the revival of God's work.

REV. W. W. LANDRUM said that a revival takes place in the hearts of the people. All denomina-tions believe in revivals, and he believed that most of those brought to Christ came in during some series of special meetings or during the "Lental pe-

He called on all who professed cor version at such seasons to rise, and nearly the whole number of preachers and professed Christians present rose to

Mr. Landrum said that the endorsement of these workers was the highest testimony to the truth of what he had said. The preachers should be pungent in their pulpits; the laymen should go to work. There ought to be more and better discipline in the churches-repressive discipline, which shall keep church-members from going astray; corrective discipline, which shall bring the wandering ones back, and when necessary, discipline which shall cut off from church-fellowship unworthy mem-bers of the churches. He quoted as a model the report of a pastor who said he had had a great revival, resulting in ten exclusions, five restorations, three additions by conversions and baptism."

THE QUESTION-BOX. Moody next proceeded to re and answer such questions as had been

5. Best way of taking care of youn converts? Put them to work.

6. Should church-members play Yes, if they can do it to the glory of God. No, if they cannot.

7. How should we instruct a who has no conviction? Bring the warnings of God's Word to bear on him, and ask God's spirit to convict him. Do not give up a man because he is not interested. 8. How are we to reach drunkards? Do not condemn him. Treat him kindly. Pray for him, and get him on his knees. God must do the work, and cast out the "devil" of rum. Throw around him the best influences, and help them by every means in your power. He gave a very interesting account of the work among the drunkards of Glasgow, a large number of whom were converted and put to work.

10. How to reach those who don' ome to church?

Put more snuff into your sermons and more life into your services. Advertise; send out circular-invitations to the meetings; go after them; adap ourselves to the needs and surround ings of the masses. He would make more of the singing, and have less of "high-toned" singing. He believed that we have no more right to sing in an "unknown tongue" than to preach or to pray in an "unknown tongue. He told several very touching incidents of the power of song, and how men who did not care for his sermons were touched and melted by Mr. Sankey' singing.

He would have solos, duets, and quartettes, and would have the whole ongregation join in the singing.

The above bare outline gives a very imperfect idea of the sharp, clean-cut, practical answers which Mr. Moody gave to these questions. The answers seemed to be generally very satisfactory, especially to the preachers present.

The next topic was, "Our Young Men-What More Can be Done for

Mr. Moody congratulated Richmond on this state of things.]

He wanted to plead for the young men away from home, who are not looked after by their employers, so that they do their work. He spoke of the peculiar temptations now besetting oung men away from home. He pleaded for a place where young men away from home could find a place to spend their spare time amid moral and religious influences. He really did not know where a man of wealth could better put his money than in such building. He really thought the best investment that could be made to-day in Richmond would be to put fifty thousand dollars, or one hundred thousand, in such a building.

He said some very sharp, incisive things, which seemed to make a fine impression on all present.

Dismissed with the benediction by Dr. A. E. Dickinson. vesterday Afternoon

The hall was packed an hour before the time for opening, many having remained in the hall after the morning

Rev. Dr. Hoge led in prayer. Mr. Moody said that he wanted to thank God for the unity which had perended this series of meetings. He camhere an entire stranger, but these Chris tian ministers and workers had rallied around him and had given him from the first their warm sympathies and active cooperation. He said that in all of his travels he had never seen anywhere more entire unity than he had found among the ministers of the Gospel and hristian people of Richmond.

His heart was too full to express his gratitude to God and to his brethren for the cordial reception and hearty c operation he had had in Richmond. He had wanted ever since the clo of the war to come into the South, and he thanked God that he had come to find the heart of Christian Richmond beat in unison with his own. He wished to thank the choir for their regular attendance and sweet singing. He had never found more willing workers in the "service of song," he should not soon forget them. He wanted to thank the ushers whom he had found not only very efficient but perfect gentlemen.

He desired also to thank the press for their reports, and especially for the kindly tone in which the papers had spoken of the meetings. At some other places there had been adverse critihad escaped him.

He had another announcement to make which gave him very great pleasure, and which he was sure would give pleasure to the congregation. At a meeting of a few business-men held since the service of the morning the sum of $15,500 had been secured on the spot for a Young Men's Christian Association hall in Richmond. Mr. Joseph Bryan had been made treasurer of this fund, and he urged all interested to send Mr. Bryan for this object a contribution, large or small If any one wanted to make a thank offering for the blessings of the past week. he knew no better direction to give it than a subscription to this effort to benefit the young men of Richmond.

In the prayer in which he then led Mr. Moody prayed God's blessing on all of the classes he had mentioned, and prayed especially for a better feeling be-tween the North and the South—that all bitterness between the sections may be banished, and that there may be growing unity and fraternity.

THE SERMON. Mr. Moody preached on Faith from the text, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for-the evidence of things not seen." Faith is the founda tion of all business and all society, and faith is the link that binds us to the promises of God. Faith involves know edge, assent, and laying hold on Christ Want of faith is not a misfortune, bu the crowning sin of the ages. Unbe lief-tells God to His face that He is a "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God."

There is a vast difference between knowing Christ by hearsay and knowing him intimately by personal trust.

There is no ground for unbelief, since God has never falsified His Word. He illustrated this point in a beautiful and striking citation of apposite Scriptures and pointed and pithy comments on them.

NEW MOZART HALL

THE PLAN FOR THE BUILDING.

The new Mozart Hall is to be built on the same premises as the present hall, but will occupy the whole space between the two adjoining buildings— viz.: 90 feet on Eighth street, with a lepth of 120 feet.

The width of the front will be feet, leaving on each side a space of 7 feet wide for light and air to the auditorium. The stage part of the build-ing will cover the entire width of the lot-90 feet.

The main floor is to be about five feet above the sidewalk, and reached by flight of granite steps forty feet wide, leading through three large double doors to a vestibule ten feet wide and forty feet long. The auditorium is to be con-nected with it by two pair of large folding doors. At each end of the ves-tibule is to be located a spacious stair-case extending to the gallery floor, and also continued down to a basement, which occupies the entire space under the auditorium. This basement can also be reached by an outside entrance-

Beside the above-mentioned three front doors there are also provided large-size doors at the end of the hall near the stage, by which means an exit can be obtained down wide stairs leading to the open space on each side building above mentioned, and from there in a direct way to the street. Ample provision has been made for dressing-rooms on the stage-floor and in the basement underneath the same, containing all modern conveniences. The basement is on the same level with the rear alley, from which it can be entered by large-size doors.

The entire building will be thorough-

JANUARY 15, 1885. Lord Garmoyle, who became a vic tim to notoriety as defendant in the Fortescue breach-of-promise suit, was Fortescue breach-of-promise suit, was in San Francisco for several days last week, having arrived on a China steamer. An exchange says : The first night he went to the opera at Baldwin's Theatre and occupied a conspicuous place in a box. A too-liberal indulgence in American mixed drinks led to his peaceful slumbering with his head on his arm in full view of the audience. He was removed by the aid of his valet and Consumers of " Dill's Best" tobacco will please notice carefully the yellow tag on the same, and see that it has the wording in black letters, " Dill's Best." Other tobaccos are being placed on the market with a tag similar in coloring to the "Dill's Best" tag, and may mislead consumers of this celebrated brand of tobacco. To be genuine, the little yellow tag must have on it "Dill's Best." In buying, do not ask for the little yellow tag, as formerly, but "Dill's Best," and see that you get what you ask for.

A Batavia (N. Y.) special says: Moganville, a village in the town of Sat ford, in this county, has quite a constion, and is making the most of Among the old inhabitants of the village are Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Fish in a farmer, well-off in the world's goods and highly esteems. They had one daughter—Ella—a beautiful girl. She attracted the attention Edwin Warner, the son of a neighboring farmer, who was very voted to her. Ella did not re-ciprocate his affection. Fresh fre-boarding-school, her ideal of husband could not be taken from the husband could not be taken from the plough, but through the advice and enentreaties of her mother she answered affirmatively the question of Warner if she would be his wife. The wedding was duly celebrated, and the happy couple went to Le Roy to reside. This was several years ago, when the young lady was just quitting her teens. In a few months the wife exhibited unmistakable signs of unhappiness and disconfent, and soon returned to her parents. Warner became dejected. He loved his wife, and her indifference toward him was painful to him. His ward him was painful to him. friends said it was not wholly fault, but he became dissipa-Mrs. Warner remained home for a year or two and then went to Michigan, returning before many months armed with a decree of divorce. She assumed her maiden name and became again what she was before her marriage, the belle of the town. Sympathy was with her. She was a leader in society, a member of the village organi-zations, and a devout attendant of the Christian church, playing the organ and singing in the choir. Her company was sought after by many young men of the vicinity. One young man was espe-cially devoted to her, and neighbors say he would have married her but for fear of Warner, who had said in public that he would take the life of any man who man, who had been a lifelong neighbor of the Fisks, pressed his attentions upon the young lady, who received them with favor, and the parents looked upon the match approvingly. The wed-ding-day was fixed, last Wednesday being named. Invitations were sent to about fifty friends, and every detail was arranged. The event was looked forward to with happiness by all con-cerned, but on Wednesday morning the family pastor, the Rev. Wm. Case, of the Christian church, informed the expectant bride and groom that, after carefully weighing the matter, he had come except I think better of that which I beto the conclusion that he could not perform the ceremony, for it was against God's law, as was laid down in the precepts of the Church in which he was a servant. His action was based upon the fact that the young lady's divorce had been obtained for other than the reasons held as essential by the laws of this State. The pastor's determination was a sad blow, but, undaunted, Mr. Waterman harnessed his horses and endeavored to secure the services of another clergyman. Those in the lo-Driven by the extremities of the case and the near approach of the fixed hour, the young man, as a last resort, appealed to the justice of the peace, who he would tie the knot were it not for the fact that he had never performed a marriage ceremony and didn't want to make a fool of himself before a large told its result. Messengers were at once dispatched to inform the invited persons of the postponement of the wedding, but only a portion of them, were notified, and the others assembled at the Fisk residence prepared to extend congratulation and good wishes. They were told of the unavoidable delay. What to do under the circumstances was a poser, but finally it was agreed that the marriage should be solemnized in Michigan, where there would be no question of the validity of the proceed On the following morning the young couple left for that State, and are now doubtless man and wife. A Breker's Mother Refusing Lonzer to Pay An advertisement which appeared yesterday morning, forbidding all persons to give credit to Sidney B. Wright, and warning them that his mother would hereafter pay no debts of his con-tracting, as she believed him to be irresponsible in many ways, is the key to a sad little piece of family history. Sindey B. Wright is the son of Mrs. Wright, the widow of Isaac M. Wright, the millionaire, and until very reresidence, No. 328 east Fifteenth street. Two years ago he became of age, and his mother purchased him a seat in the New York Petroleum Exchange, and started him in life as a broker. gaged fine offices at No. 81 New street. and began his career with every pros pect of success. He was a bright young man, very sociable, and full of life and spirits, and he soon became a favorite on the floor of the Exchange. Here he pect of success. He was a bright met with congenial companions, with whom he spent his money freely, and lived what is generally known as a very fast life.

His downward career was short, and finally, last summer, he had reached a point where he neglected his business, failed to meet his engagements, and was seldom to be found at his office. The result was that his customers dropped away from him, he became financially involved, and borrowed money from his friends, which he was unable to repay. His mother, with the hope of checking friends, which he was unable to repay. His mother, with the hope of checking him, refused to advance him any more money unless he reformed, and finally about two months ago, he sold his seat in the Petroleum Exchange, and since then he has been seen little at his mother's house. Bills of his contracting, however, have been sent to Mrs. Wright for collection, and it was to put a ston to this annovance that she nubstop to this annoyance that she pub-lished the advertisement. Mrs. Wright has done all that a mother could do to reform her wayward son, and she is almost prostrated by the grief which he has caused her.
